As part of the accreditation process by the National Assessment and Accreditation Council (NAAC) in India, the IQAC is responsible for collecting feedback from various stakeholders, including teachers. The feedback process typically involves the use of a feedback form or Performa that is designed to gather specific information about the teaching faculty. The aim is to assess the effectiveness of teaching and identify areas for improvement.

Feedback Analysis from Teachers 2021-2022

The analysis of feedback from teachers plays a pivotal role in the comprehensive assessment of higher education institutions in India. This crucial component of the accreditation process is designed to gauge the effectiveness of teaching methodologies, curriculum delivery, and the overall academic environment within an institution. Teachers are integral stakeholders in the educational ecosystem, and their insights provide valuable perspectives on various facets, including pedagogical approaches, faculty development, and student engagement. NAAC employs a structured approach, often utilizing standardized questionnaires and surveys, to systematically collect feedback from faculty members. This feedback analysis is a key element integrated into the broader evaluation framework, contributing to a holistic understanding of an institution's academic quality.
